Children's Right to Protection

In 2016, the United Arab Emirates enacted Federal Law No. 3 on Child Rights, known as Wadeema's Law. This law includes the Right to Protection, which stipulates that the following shall be considered threats to a child's physical, psychological, moral, or mental integrity, thereby necessitating their right to protection:

01 Loss of both parents and living without a breadwinner or tutor

02 Child's exposure to neglect, rejection and homelessness

03 Obvious and continuous default in education and care

04 Habitual child abuse

05 Child's exposure to exploitation or sexual abuse

06 Child's exposure to exploitation by illegal organizations and in organized crime, such as planting the ideas of intolerance and hatred or inciting the child to carry out acts of violence and intimidation

07 Child's exposure to begging or to economic exploitation

08 Inability of the parents or custodian to provide care or to raise the child

09 Child's exposure to kidnapping, sale or trafficking for any purpose or to exploitation of any form

10 Psychological or mental disability that affects the child's ability to perception
